

Fulcrum Therapeutics to Present at Biotech Showcase 2019

January 4, 2019

Cambridge, Mass. – January 4, 2019 – Fulcrum Therapeutics, a company focused on discovering and developing small molecule therapies to unlock gene control and treat serious genetic diseases, will present at next week's Biotech Showcase in San Francisco.

Robert J. Gould, Ph.D., Fulcrum's president and chief executive officer, will discuss Fulcrum's approach to developing novel therapies for rare genetic diseases. By harnessing the breakthrough biology of gene regulation, Fulcrum aims to modulate the expression of genes known to drive disease and develop highly personalized medicines that will make a significant difference for patients who are currently without treatments.

Fulcrum's lead program targets facioscapulohumeral muscular dystrophy (FSHD), a rare neuromuscular disorder. Fulcrum has initiated clinical trial readiness studies in FSHD in partnership with the FSHD Clinical Trial Readiness Network. In addition to muscle disorders, Fulcrum is also advancing treatments for disorders of the central nervous system and blood.
